NEOSHO VALLEY.

C. L. ARNOLD, Reporter.

On last Friday afternoon one of Marion Preston's boys was raking hay with a two horse rake, when something got out of fix about the harness and the boy walked out on the tongue to fix it. At this juncture the horses became frightened and began to run and kick. By having a firm hold on the harness and keeping his feet on the tongue the boy managed to stay up until the horses ran into a post of a wire fence and broke the tongue and let the boy fall. Those who saw the act cannot see how he escaped being kicked, or mangled by the rake passing over him, but he was not hurt. The rake was badly broken.
